Conscious Living

Open mind means the ability to suspend judgment, to see things not as a consequence of habitual, conditioned, thinking, but an openness and freshness like that of a child.

On one hand, it requires both focus and awareness. On the other, it is liberating.

“Real fearlessness is the product of tenderness. It comes from letting the world tickle your heart, your raw and beautiful heart. You are willing to open up, without resistance or shyness, and face the world. You are willing to share your heart with others."~Chögyam Trungpa

Suggested Reading: The Myth of Freedom and the Way of Meditation by Chögyam Trungpa [Marvin Casper (Editor), John Baker (Editor)]

Chögyam Trungpa was a Tibetan buddhist monk who escaped Tibet and eventually came to America. He was born on March 5, 1939, Kham, Tibet. He founded the Naropa University in Boulder, Colorado. He was also the founder of Vajradhatu (now Shambhala International). He left his body on April 4th, 1987, in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Philanthropy

"Traditionally, there are three types of generosity. The first one is ordinary generosity, giving material goods or providing comfortable situations for others.

The second one is the gift of fearlessness. You reassure others and teach them that they don't have to feel completely tormented and freaked out about their existence. You help them to see that there is basic goodness and spiritual practice. There is a way for them to sustain their lives.

The third type of generosity is the gift of the dharma. You show others that there is a path that consists of discipline, meditation, and intellect or knowledge. Through all three types of generosity, you can open up other people's minds. In that way, their closedness, wretchedness, and small thinking can be turned into a larger vision."~ From " The Basic Principle of Bodhicitta"

From Wikipedia: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Maimonides>

Moses ben Maimon, commonly known as Maimonides was a Jewish philosopher who became one of the most prolific and influential Torah scholars of the Middle Ages. In his time, he was also a preeminent astronomer and physician. Born in Córdoba, Almoravid Empire (present-day Spain) on Passover Eve, 1135 or 1138 he worked as a rabbi, physician, and philosopher in Morocco and Egypt. He died in Egypt on December 12, 1204, whence his body was taken to the lower Galilee and buried in Tiberias.
